Teaching- Learning Process

Our college places a strong emphasis on student-centric learning and the development of life skills, with faculty members working diligently to create an engaging and inclusive educational experience. The teaching methods used in the institution are diverse and aim to cater to different learning styles. These include traditional chalk-and-talk lectures, ICT-enhanced lessons, practical work, project work, seminars, discussions, and student interactions. The teaching faculty is committed to starting lectures with fundamental concepts, ensuring that students at all levels can easily grasp the material, and no student is left behind. Practical learning is central to our approach, especially in courses that involve hands-on work. In these courses, students engage in active learning by observing, doing, and experiencing the subject matter, which helps reinforce their understanding. The college encourages participative and problem-solving methodologies in classrooms. Students are often asked to engage in discussions on various topics, and in many courses, they are required to participate in seminars and make presentations. After these presentations, students are encouraged to join in discussions, which promotes critical thinking and deeper understanding.
